

Innovations Unveils Summer 2019 Collection

Introducing Divine Proportions, the Design Studio's intuitive response to the rise in geometric-leaning design.

New York City (May 2019) — Contemporary shapes and unexpected textures lead product development in Innovations' new collection, Divine Proportions. Perception of beauty derives from organic patterns and geometric rule; these 11 alluring wallcoverings analyze the connection between natural surroundings and mathematical proportions.

Cobra, a large-scale reptile pattern, serves as a sculptural focal point in the collection. While Lattice, a non-woven redolent of Lisbon's azulejos tilework, summarizes the beauty between mathematical rule and customary color work. Murals, Vandal and Motley, showcase the achievable elegance of everchanging patterns and bold prints. Vector, Gobi and Ripple, three Type II vinyls, spotlight versatile texture with off-kilter patterns and artistic class.

The collection's rich colors and bold prints are complimented with youthful palettes and organic patterns like Campello, an earthy natural-woven, and Spalt, a flame stitch textile wallcovering. The calming lines of Mazarin, a metallic cork, and the understated beauty of Hemlock, a modern ombre, satisfy the notion that ultra-sleek design doesn't require complicated patterns.

These 11 new releases are accompanied by a recolor of two Innovations classics, Sumatra and Rangoon Silk.

MAZ-07 Tavernier, SPA-05 Douglas Fir, CMP-07 Villena

Mazarin, Spalt and Campello exemplify the compelling variety of geometric, organic, and bold patterns offered in the Divine Proportions Collection.

A unique laser cutting technique adds beguiling texture to Cobra's reptile pattern, a striking large-scale surface perfect for statement walls.

Just as nature puts one at ease, these new wallcoverings adopt qualities that refuse to overcomplicate interior surfaces. Divine Proportions launches this June.
